Modalities of Political Anthropology

Professor Arpad Szakolczai (University College Cork)

10:15–11:45 | The Square ARENA 11-2091

Join us for an event brought to you through the collaboration of the HSG Collegium and the Ethnography Talks. Political anthropology can be considered as a subfield of the modern academic discipline of anthropology, but can also be considered, based on long-standing traditions in thought, in a much broader sense. Following this tradition, the talk will introduce how political anthropology is considered in the Elgar Encyclopedia of Political Anthropology: as a way to explore the anthropological underpinnings of politics, or the “pre-political”, in the broadest possible sense of the term.

These events take place in a hybrid format via Zoom:
